HISTORY OF ARMY BEING COMPILED

BY CHAS. S. HAYDEN

with the men of the 20th division is as follows:

This division arrived in France during the latter part of May, 1918. They received their preliminary training at Nordausques in Flanders, under the direction of the British.

On July 4 the division was brigaded with the Second British army in line between Ypres and Kenmel hill. The headquarters of the division were at Watou, Belgium. The enemy got the range of this town and bombarded it intermittently with a 5.9 gun from a disance of seven miles, destroying many buildings and inflicting essualties on the civil and military population.

The commanding position of the enemy on the top of Kenmel hill, which gave them an enfillading view of the entire on the top of Kemmel hill, which gave them an entilading view of the entire British positions, made this period of training unusually hazardous, and the division suffered a large number of casualities on this account. On Aug. II the division launched an attack against the enemy and captured Voormezeele. Lankhof farm and lock No. 7. King Al-bert stated that this was the first American division to shed blood on Bel-gian soil.

American division to shed blood on Belgian soil.

The division was then moved to the Bellicourt sector, midway between Cambrai and St. Quentin. An enemy altack on Sept. 25, cast of Hargicourt was repulsed by rifle and machine gun fire with light casualities.

On Sept. 29, in connection with the plan of the Fourth British army to break the famous Hindenburg line, the division launched a powerful attack against Bellicourt and Naurcy. Supported by tanks they crossed the underground St. Quentin canal, captured Bellicourt and Naurcy and took over 1,200 prisoners and much material.

They penetrated to a depth of about 5,000 yards and completely smashed the supposedly impregnable Hindenburg line at this point.

On Oct. 5 the division attacked to the east and north of Montbrehain, capturing all objectives on a front of 5,000 yards and 1,550 prisoners. On the same day a strong hostile counter-attack was

On Oct. 8 the division continued its advance and captured the villages of Premont, Brancourt, Businy and St. Souplet, capturing prisoners, 32 guns, many machine guns and other material. On Oct. 10 one of the brigades of this division made an advance of six kilometers, reaching the Selle river. On Oct. 18 the division launched an attack on lits entire from and advanced 2,000 yards against stubborn resistance, capturing 14 officers and over 1,500 men. On Oct. 19, after three weeks of almost continuous fighting over terrain covered with formidable defenses, of the Hindenburg line, the division was taken out of the line for a much-needed rest.

County Court In Merry War Over Small Job

That little job of poil tax collector is a good job and pays well. When the fee hill cut out fees for all state and county offices this little job continued to pay fees, but it is good for a cold $4,000 on had years and more on fat years. The fat years are election years.

Now this little job in Shelby has always been held by a woman, or at least two women. When the joh was created some time back Miss Ida O. Henry was the first collector, and Miss Ida held the job and held it well, as figures will attest, until the Mike Tate regime threw her out to put in Miss Lydia Douglass, the Incumbent Miss Louglass won the office while her brother, Ennis, was a city commissioner and T. C. Ashcroft was mayor. Ashcroft and Tate then controlled the county court which elects.

A merry little war is on now for the job, although the office will not be cacant until July term of the county court.

The significance of this election in July is that it will show whather Mayor Monteverde controls the county court or whether, as it is claimed, the court is an independent body for the first time in years.

Draft Covered Many Sins For Morehead

J. It Morehead, famed as a rum raider for the solice department in days past, and more recently discharged from the I'S army, was more lucky when he returned from war than W. T. McLain, who resigned the fat office of city commissioner. Morehead was caught in the draft. He is back on the police force, from which he was fired some time ago, but McLain failed to get the job he left, due to the fact that Commissioner Quinn, elected to succeed him, refused to resign on the pleathst Mayor Monteverde and Commissioners Mason and Miller said they would refuse to accept his resignation. It is an awful thing to have a job that you can't quit, even for patriotic reasures.

you can't quit, even for patriolic reasors.

Morehead was fired from the police department on a charge of getting away with some whisky at police station by taking it down the side of the police station wall like the human fly took himself up the Exchange building.

Morehead, after being fired, returned to Thompson Bros. undertakers, where he had worked before entering police service. He was drafted while working for that firm and was sent to Camp Dix. N. J., for training. En route on the soldier train Morehead was severely beaten by bootlegger draftees in a free-for-all scrap on the train.

He returned from the army about 10 days ago and was put on the motorcycle emergency squad.
